

You have waited...

You have waited and waited, are you really prepared for a life that's dependent on you for her care?

She will need you for shelter for food and for clothes,
twelve thousand a year is the cost so you know.

You have waited and waited and soon is the time to read stories and fables and old nursery rhymes.
She will need you to teach her to read and to write and keep monsters in closets on stormy nights.

You have waited and waited, are you ready to stay up many long nights and many long days?
She will need you to give her so much care and devotion with tea parties and dress up and make-up and lotions.

You have waited and waited, are you up to the test?
Will you give her your all and your very best?
She will be in good hands, I know this is true,
for when God thought of a mom, he thought of you.
