

John and Audrey

December 6th, 2020

They say marriage is like baking, the recipe is quite complex, grab some flour and some sugar as you wonder what comes next.

If you followed the instructions, then you're guaranteed success, but if you measured poorly then you'll surely have a mess!

They say marriage is like math somehow, solving problems left and right, use Pythagoras and quadratics and you'll be looking pretty bright!

If the theorems were all accurate then the numbers fall in place,

but divide instead of multiply, it's an engineered disgrace.

So where are the best instructions for a marriage strong and sure?

Look no further than the scriptures to both grow and to mature.

Corinthians is where you'll find some great wisdom, love and truth.

Ephesians says to "be ye kind", "I'll go where you go", says Ruth.

Build your house upon the solid Rock, so when the storms roll by, your walls will still be standing and you'll be safe and high and dry.

Find the time for one another, blazing trails through mountain streams, the place they call the School House is just the start of all your dreams.

So no matter if you're baking, solving problems big and small, finding really grand success or sometimes on your face you fall, you're surrounded by your families, those bonds will last for life, as Audrey takes him as her husband and John takes her as his wife.
