

The Land vs The Sea

One hundred years plus twenty one, the battle rages on,
a spectacle upon the field with uniforms they don.
Knights against Midshipman, the sea against the land,
mountains move, the ocean swells, nothing is so grand!
One is a force unmovable, they pound the earth with might,
the Grey stands at the ready and twill be a hellish fight.
The other is a mighty wave, a tsunami wall of power,
the Blue above and deep below is ready for the hour.
The victory that each one seeks is not fortune or for fame,
for this Brotherhood, this Cadre, it's more than just a game.
One will win and one will lose, Alma Maters they will raise,
who will be singing second, the Navy Blue or Army Grey?
When they leave this field of dreams, they'll serve against our foes, as their nation calls upon them, for some the blood will flow.
The battle lines are drawn again, the field has been prepared,
there's thunder in the distance and there's lightening in the air.
The land will fight the sea again, mountains quake and oceans roar, pay your Respect and Honor to the Brigade and to the Corps.

GO NAVY BEAT ARMY!
